curve - workplace options - longer live in caves or have to fight off animals, we still have an alarm button that sounds inside when we might be in danger. we call this the fight-or-flight response . we all experience high arousal from time to time. it is only a problem when it gets to the point where we feel we have no control over it, if it persists for too long, or if it occurs when there is no actual threat or danger ... information for patients fight or flight and relaxed breathing - "fight or flight" reaction) which prepares our bodies for action. the "fight or flight" reaction was very useful in the past, when our ancestors lived in caves and were threatened by wild animals. the reaction prepared them for running or fighting. we still possess this survival reaction and it can be useful when we need to act quickly, for example, getting out of the way of a speeding ...
